NEW QUESTION: 1

F. Scott Fitzgerald was a prominent American writer of the twentieth century. This passage comes from one of his short stories and tells the story of a young John Unger leaving home for boarding school. John T. Unger came from a family that had been well known in Hades a small town on the Mississippi River for several generations. John's father had held the amateur golf championship through many a heated contest; Mrs. Unger was known "from hot-box to hot-bed," as the local phrase went, for her political addresses; and young John T. Unger, who had just turned sixteen, had danced all the latest dances from New York before he put on long trousers. And now, for a certain time, he was to be away from home. That respect for a New England education which is the bane of all provincial places, which drains them yearly of their most promising young men, had seized upon his parents. Nothing would suit them but that he should go to St. Midas's School near Boston-Hades was too small to hold their darling and gifted son. Now in Hades-as you know if you ever have been there the names of the more fashionable preparatory schools and colleges mean very little. The inhabitants have been so long out of the world that, though they make a show of keeping up-to-date in dress and manners and literature, they depend to a great extent on hearsay, and a function that in Hades would be considered elaborate would doubtless be hailed by a Chicago beef-princess as "perhaps a little tacky."

John T. Unger was on the eve of departure. Mrs. Unger, with maternal fatuity, packed his trunks full of linen suits and electric fans, and Mr. Unger presented his son with an asbestos pocket-book stuffed with money.

"Remember, you are always welcome here," he said. "You can be sure, boy, that we'll keep the home fires burning." "I know," answered John huskily.

"Don't forget who you are and where you come from," continued his father proudly, "and you can do nothing to harm you. You are an Unger-from Hades."

So the old man and the young shook hands, and John walked away with tears streaming from his eyes.

Ten minutes later he had passed outside the city limits and he stopped to glance back for the last time.

Over the gates the old-fashioned Victorian motto seemed strangely attractive to him. His father had tried time and time again to have it changed to something with a little more push and verve about it, such as "Hades-Your Opportunity," or else a plain "Welcome" sign set over a hearty handshake pricked out in electric lights. The old motto was a little depressing, Mr. Unger had thought-but now.

So John took his look and then set his face resolutely toward his destination. And, as he turned away, the lights of Hades against the sky seemed full of a warm and passionate beauty.

John's meditation on the town's sign in the passage serves primarily to suggest a contrast between

- A. his father's naivety and John's pragmatism.
- B. his father's commercialism and John's sentimentality.
- C. the old-fashioned atmosphere in the town before John's father influenced it and its current modernity.
- D. John's previous role as a part of the town and his new role as nostalgic outsider.
- E. John's love of Victorian things and his father's love of modern things.

Answer: D

Explanation:

If you were leaving home (and you were crying), why would you stop and look back? Most likely you would do so because you were sad to leave and wanted to get one last look before you went. Which of the answer choices matches this sentiment? Choice C. does. The meditation on what the sign says serves to emphasize the quaintness of the town, of which John will no longer be a part. The other answers rely on your being distracted from the main emotions of the story.

NEW QUESTION: 2

You have been asked to create a report that displays order total and case creation date for all orders. What should you do to address this requirement?

- A. Optimize both properties
- B. No properties require optimization
- C. Optimize only the order total property
- D. Optimize only case creation date property

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 3

DECLARE @traceEventId int = 122;
DECLARE @traceColumnIdForTextData int = 1;
DECLARE @durationFilter bigint = 100
DECLARE @ databaseID int;

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

The following system stored procedures are used to define and manage traces:

* `sp_trace_create` is used to define a trace and specify an output file location as well as other options that I'll cover in the coming pages. This stored procedure returns a handle to the created trace, in the form of an integer trace ID.

* `sp_trace_setevent` is used to add event/column combinations to traces based on the trace ID, as well as to remove them, if necessary, from traces in which they have already been defined.

* `sp_trace_setfilter` is used to define event filters based on trace columns.

* `sp_trace_setstatus` is called to turn on a trace, to stop a trace, and to delete a trace definition once you're done with it. Traces can be started and stopped multiple times over their lifespan.
