NEW QUESTION: 2
Which components are building blocks of a data center? (Choose two.)
A. financial resources
B. processes
C. infrastructure
D. building systems
E. information systems
Answer: C,E
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:

Before defining what a data center is, let's take a look at the different domains that make up information technology. The business strategy domain refers to the match an organization makes between its internal resources and skills and opportunities and risks created by the external environment. Below that, functional or organizational groups define workgroups, processes, standards, and policies. A project is considered an undertaking with a defined starting point and defined objectives by which completion is identified. A process is a specific order of work activities or the task of transforming input into output.
Finally, information systems are applications that directly or indirectly define business processes.
Infrastructure refers to facilities and permanent components, such as hardware, operating systems, and local and network services.

NEW QUESTION: 3
A company is building a web and mobile application that uses a serverless architecture powered by AWS Lambda and Amazon API Gateway. The company wants to fully automate the backend Lambda deployment based on code that is pushed to the appropriate environment branch in an AWS CodeCommit repository. The deployment must have the following: *Separate environment pipelines for testing and production. *Automatic deployment that occurs for test environments only. Which steps should be taken to meet these requirements?
A. Create two AWS CodePipeline configurations for test and production environments. Configure the production pipeline to have a manual approval step. Create one CodeCommit repository with a branch for each environment. Set up each CodePipeline to retrieve the source code from the appropriate branch in the repository. Set up the deployment step to deploy the Lambda functions with AWS CloudFormation.
B. Create two AWS CodePipeline configurations for test and production environments. Configure the production pipeline to have a manual approval step. Create a CodeCommit repository for each environment. Set up each CodePipeline to retrieve the source code from the appropriate repository. Set up the deployment step to deploy the Lambda functions with AWS CloudFormation.
