NEW QUESTION: 1

Which two utilities can be used to predict the consequences of a filesystem failure for the Oracle 12c Clusterware stack?

- A. srvctl predict....
- B. asmcmd
- C. crsctl fail....
- D. acfsutil
- E. asmca
- F. advmutil

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

B: The `srvctl predict filesystem` command predicts the consequences of file system failure.

E: The `acfsutil info fs` command displays detailed Oracle ACFS file system information, such as:

`iscorrupt` - 1 if the file system is corrupt, 0 if file system is not corrupt.

Incorrect Answers:

A: `ASMCMD` is a command-line utility that you can use to manage Oracle ASM instances, disk groups, file access control for disk groups, files and directories within disk groups, templates for disk groups, and volumes.

C: There is no `crsctl fail` command.

There is a `crsctl eval fail resource` command to predict the consequences of a resource, not the file system, failing.

D: Oracle ASM Configuration Assistant (ASMCA) supports installing and configuring Oracle ASM instances, disk groups, volumes, and Oracle Automatic Storage Management Cluster File System (Oracle ACFS). In addition, you can use the ASMCA command-line interface as a non-GUI utility.

F: `advmutil canonical` displays the canonical name of the specified Oracle ADVM device name.

`dvmutil tune` displays the value of a specific Oracle ADVM parameter or sets the value of a specific Oracle ADVM parameter.

`advmutil volinfo` displays information about Oracle ADVM volume devices.
