Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

The PBR Recursive Next Hop feature enhances routemaps to enable configuration of a recursive next-hop IP address that is used by policy-based routing (PBR). The recursive next-hop IP address is installed in the routing table and can be a subnet that is not directly connected. If the recursive next-hop IP address is not available, packets are routed using a default route.

If both a next-hop and a recursive next-hop IP address are present in the same route-map entry, the next-hop is used. If the next-hop is not available, the recursive next-hop is used. If there cursive next-hop is not available and no other IP address is present, the packet is routed using the default routing table; it is not dropped.
