NEW QUESTION: 3

A hosting organization operates from two data centers and typically hosts very large customers. The delivery and support of the IT Infrastructure is not service driven. The IT technical delivery functions operate in silos. Customers suffer a significant lead time to establish new operational environments. In addition, changes to applications that impact the infrastructure have a long lead time.

One of the customers has requested a service-driven approach for a new business application and its associated infrastructure. The hosting organization has agreed to build a PaaS offering.

Which operational tool and process transformation approach is most suitable for the hosting company?

- A. Deploy additional cloud tools alongside existing tooling. Train the IT operations teams to use the new tools. Start to transform operations once the cloud is up and running.
- B. Design a new service-driven set of tools and processes. Train some of the IT operations teams to use the new tools. In advance of service demand, procure appropriate storage, network and compute capability for the cloud.
- C. Design a new service-driven set of tools and processes. Train the IT operations teams to use the new tools. Manage cloud capacity using the existing process to order storage, network and compute.
- D. Use the existing mature tools and processes that are used for all customers. Manage cloud capacity using the existing process to order storage, network and compute.

Answer: B
