NEW QUESTION: 2
Which choice below is NOT a common information-gathering technique when performing a risk analysis?
A. Distributing a questionnaire
B. Interviewing terminated employees
C. Employing automated risk assessment tools

D. Reviewing existing policy documents
Answer: B
Explanation:
Any combination of the following techniques can be used in gathering information relevant to the IT system within its operational boundary: Questionnaire. The questionnaire should be distributed to the applicable technical and nontechnical management personnel who are designing or supporting the IT system.
On-site Interviews. On-site visits also allow risk assessment personnel to observe and gather information about the physical, environmental, and operational security of the IT system.
Document Review. Policy documents, system documentation, and security-related documentation can provide good information about the security controls used by and planned for the IT system.
Use of Automated Scanning Tools. Proactive technical methods can be used to collect system information efficiently.
