NEW QUESTION: 1

Which element of worker's compensation common law prevented employees from being compensated when their injury was caused by a colleague?

- A. good Samaritan law.
- B. fellow servant rule
- C. voluntary assumption of risk
- D. doctrine of contributory negligence

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation: The fellow servant rule prevented employees from being compensated when their injury was caused by a colleague. As the phrase suggests, this notion dates back to the time when workers were entirely uncompensated. In the past century, the legal system has begun to recognize that workers require more protection than is provided by relics of common law like the fellow servant rule.

NEW QUESTION: 3

A female adult patient who had a major abdominal surgery asks the nurse if she can return to work after discharge. The most appropriate response by the nurse would be:

- A. "What type of work do you have in mind?"
- B. "Yes, but I'm sure you know what it means to take it easy?"
- C. "No, because you should get plenty of rest when you get home."
- D. "No, not for at least 2 weeks."

Answer: A

Explanation:

The most appropriate response by the nurse would be "What type of work do you have in mind?" The nurse must identify the patient's work activities before an appropriate response can be made.

A discharge plan is often made not only by the nurse, but by an interdisciplinary team including the patients, physician, physio and occupational therapists, as well as other allied health professionals.
